Gott Wine?

This beautiful barrel top by artist, Laurie Salmela is inspired by one of tonight's honorary winemasters, Joel Gott Winery. The content of the work comes from a desire to relate the great strength and abundance found in nature. The artist draws her imagery from the dense forest of her summer home in the woods of Wisconsin, the jungles of her favorite winter retreat in the Yucatan, and her own backyard. The profusion of colors, textures and light serve as continual inspiration.

Lucy's Italian Movie

Dian J. Wall-Wagner has always taken her art very seriously. Few people know that at one time the zany redhead considered a career in movies or television comedy instead of painting. But, Dian's husband Ricky, the famous band leader, told her, "Ai, yai, yai, yai, yai, Dian! I am NOT putting you in my show at the Tropicana." Although Dian's friends, Fred and Ethel tried to help Dian with her schemes to appear at the club, Dian eventually decided to stick with painting instead. Dian, an ardent astrology buff, was shocked to learn that her birthday was one day from Lucille Balls, despite their dramatic differences and having nothing in common. Despite what polar opposites they are, Dian decided to paint this tribute to Lucy.
